

ALL WILL BE WELL

Amid the craziness all around us we once again enter the Easter season. The resurrection reminds you and me that the final word rests with God alone. Were we one-dimensional creatures who believed that the well-being of society solely rested upon our own best efforts, we would certainly, as St. Paul stated, be "... among those most to be pitied." As we view the current state of affairs, we may feel as impotent and powerless as we are in the face of our own ultimate demise. Yet, as people of faith, we can proclaim that life and sanity are God-gifts beyond our current understanding, and they bring a message of hope proclaiming, "All will be well."

The resurrection not only assures us that there is hope for our fractured society, but that each of us can experience transformation, healing, and new life in our own fractured lives. We must risk letting go of those familiar (and sometimes comfortable) thoughts, behaviors, and attitudes that have impeded, held back, and sabotaged the life of abundance we were created to experience. We must learn to view our past as teaching opportunities rather than judgements handed down by an unforgiving judge. We are invited to allow God to have God's way with us, which will open the door to a life far beyond anything we could ask for, or imagine.

So what will you decide for your own life in this coming season of Resurrection? Will you become vulnerable to the possibilities of God? Are you willing to be made new? These are not easy questions to answer. But a willingness to say "Yes" to God is the first crucial step. May God grant you the courage to take a chance, and experience the new, abundant life that can await you. Praise God!

Fr. Bill+
